

Attention Bookseller: Please fold along score and slide shelftalker under books.

Heather Has Two Mommies

by Lesléa Newman, illustrated by Laura Cornell

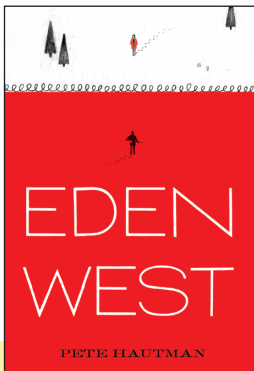

“Heather Has Two Mommies is a classic that has lived on in all of our hearts.

Originally published twenty-five years ago, this beloved story has been found on the shelves of many different families. Now it's been given new life with updated text and colorful, sweet illustrations. But it carries the same heartfelt message that it's love, and love alone, that makes a family. A must read for everyone's shelf!”

—Hannah Moushabeck, Odyssey Bookshop, South Hadley, MA

CANDLEWICK PRESS

Attention Bookseller: Please fold along score and slide shelftalker under books.

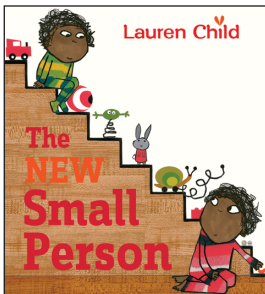

Eden West by Pete Hautman

“Nod is the new Garden of Eden, where the Grace await the end times assured of their salvation. Or so Jacob’s been told. Protected from the wicked temptations of the World, Jacob is shaken when he encounters outsiders for the first time, threatening his commitment to his faith and his community. Pete Hautman perfectly captures the confusion and hope of budding love in this haunting novel.”

—Beth Wagner, Phoenix Books, Burlington & Essex, VT

CANDLEWICK PRESS

Attention Bookseller: Please fold along score and slide shelftalker under books.

The New Small Person

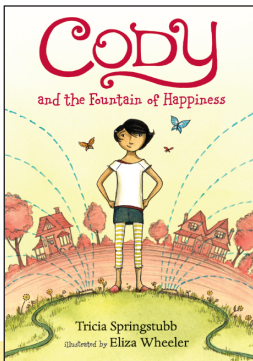

by Lauren Child

*“Lauren Child is the queen of minimalist childpower hilarity. In The New Small Person, she turns her wry eye on the new-sibling dilemma. Elmore Green doesn’t need to share attention, toys, or candy. When the new small person arrives, it is an unwelcome nuisance —until Elmore discovers that sharing experiences (and even candy) is extra fun with a brother.”*

—Elizabeth Bluemle, The Flying Pig Bookstore, Shelburne, VT

CANDLEWICK PRESS

Attention Bookseller: Please fold along score and slide shelftalker under books.

Cody and the Fountain of Happiness

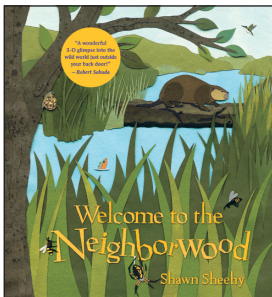

by Tricia Springstubb, illustrated by Eliza Wheeler

“Cody and the Fountain of Happiness is the delightful beginning to a new series. Cody has a big imagination and a kind heart. She loves her family and her new best friend, Spencer, and cares for the ants in her backyard. Although Cody has the best intentions, sometimes she does the wrong thing for the right reason, and events do not work out as she plans.”

—Robin Sung, Porter Square Books, Cambridge, MA

CANDLEWICK PRESS

Attention Bookseller: Please fold along score and slide shelftalker under books.

Welcome to the Neighborwood

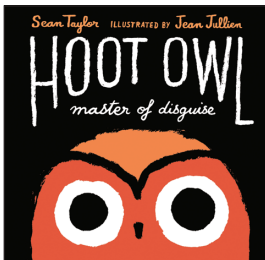

by Shawn Sheehy

“Seven woodland neighbors show off their homes in wonderfully elaborate pop-ups. They include an animal that carries its house with it, another that eats its home every night and rebuilds in the morning, the world’s second-largest rodent (can you guess?), and more. Great for nature lovers or budding builders of any age.”

— Deborah Johnson, Barstons Child’s Play, Washington, D.C.

CANDLEWICK PRESS

Attention Bookseller: Please fold along score and slide shelftalker under books.

Hoot Owl, Master of Disguise

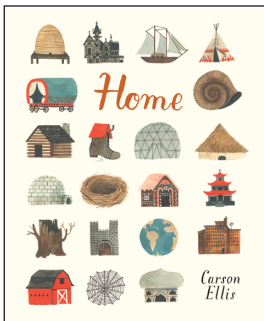

by Sean Taylor, illustrated by Jean Jullien

“Bold, colorful illustrations complement this suspenseful tale of a clever little hungry hoot owl. He uses many disguises in his hunt for dinner, but they don’t seem to be enough to do the trick. Will his last attempt finally be masterful enough to succeed? You will never look at a decorative birdbath the same way again.”

— Ashley Despain, Green Apple Books, San Francisco, CA

CANDLEWICK PRESS

Attention Bookseller: Please fold along score and slide shelftalker under books.

Home by Carson Ellis

“Home is exquisite, enchanting, and enlightening. This gorgeous work of art depicting people and their nontraditional homes belongs on your coffee table. A gem for all who delight in the whimsical and appreciate the diversity of our unique lives—both real and imagined. There is something new to discover each time you pick it up. Sure to become a family treasure.”

—Arna Lewis, Buttonwood Books and Toys, Cohasset, MA

CANDLEWICK PRESS