

Home by Carson Ellis

Dear Reader,

Homes are everywhere.

They are houses in the country and they are apartments. They are also beehives, birds' nests, wigwams, undersea palaces, and space stations. The more we look for homes, the more we find them: massive and tiny, messy and clean, permanent and temporary, boring and fantastic. There are many different kinds of homes and many ways for homes to differ, but they do have a few things in common: Home is where we keep our things. Home is where we raise our families. Home is where we lay our heads down at night and drift off to sleep. Even a bird does this in its nest. Even Odin does this in Valhalla.

*It's my absolute pleasure to share Home with you.
I hope you like it.*

C. Ellis